Burned body identified as NJ woman

Victim of Bridgewater homicide used to live in Hyde Park.

NATE HOMAN
@MetroBOS
nate.homan@metro.us

The body of the woman who was bound and set on fire in Bridgewater on Tuesday has been identified as a 29-year-old mother from New Jersey.

According to the Plymouth County District Attorney's office, the body is that of Ashley Bortner, of Paulsboro, New Jersey.

Bridgewater police received a 911 for a report of a suspicious vehicle parked near the MBTA railroad tracks near Oak and Crapo.

Officers said they arrived to find a fire burning on the west side of the tracks and determined that it was a burning body. Bridgewater Fire Department responded and extinguished the flames.

Investigators said they believe Bortner was killed at a different location and her body was dumped at the tracks, where she was set on fire.

Ashley Bortner PROVIDED

The incident does not appear to be related to a burned body and car fire in Worcester on Wednesday night, according to Plymouth County District Attorney Timothy Cruz' office.

Tamar Pack, Bortner's mother, told the Boston Herald that she had not seen her daughter, an eighth-grade dropout, in three years.

However, they were in constant contact by phone right up until her death. Pack adopted and has been raising Bortner's now-13-year-old son.

She said her daughter once lived in Hyde Park.

Officials investigate the crime scene. PROVIDED

T could cut Ride costs by $46M

The most extreme cost-cutting option at T board's disposal includes a fare hike for disabled riders.

SPENCER BUELL
@MetroBOS
spencer.buell@metro.us

The MBTA could slice as much as $46 million from the budget for the Ride, the service which gives subsidized lifts to people with disabilities, a MassDOT leader said Monday.

Options for cutting costs for the service include boosting fares for disabled Ride users from $3 to up to $4.20, which at double the cost of a bus ticket would be the highest fare allowed by the federal Americans With Disabilities Act, according to Michael Lambert, MassDOT's deputy administrator.

Lambert stressed that there is no proposal on the table to hike fares by that much, and that he was presenting the MBTA's fiscal and management control board with the most extreme options at their disposal to rein in costs.

Other ideas currently being tested in pilots include allowing Ride users to take state-subsidized rides in taxis or via ride-sharing services like Uber and Lyft (for those whose wheelchairs can fit) and training Ride users to ride buses and trains with free or reduced-cost passes, Lambert said. He added that those options also give riders more flexibility than the Ride, which requires users to book lifts far in advance.

The state could also legally cease offering the Ride outside a federally mandated coverage area, he said.

A man speaks at the board meeting. DEREK KOUYOUMJIAN

Making all those changes would theoretically cut the Ride budget to $62 million in 2017, Lambert said, down from a projected $108 million.

Subsidizing the Ride costs the state $46.88 per trip, compared with $2.07 for MBTA rides systemwide, according to a report.

City ordinance bans fake guns in public

Robbery with a fake gun PROVIDED

Sometimes crafted out of heavy pieces of metal and fitted with all the features of a real weapon, replica firearms can be nearly identical to the real thing.

The toy guns, which often shoot metal BB's or Airsoft pellets, look so lifelike that they've become a nuisance for Boston police officers forced to decide in a split second whether a suspect's weapon is real, or whether it isn't.

Fake gun PROVIDED

"Replica guns have become a big issue for us," Boston Police Commissioner William Evans said in a statement Monday. "We all too often encounter young people who are carrying these fake guns, and even though they are fake, the public and police don't know they are."

On Monday, Mayor Marty Walsh signed an ordinance banning the use of fake guns in public places. It would allow police to confiscate lifelike firearms, and would allow their owners to pick them back up at a police station, according to a release. Replica owners under 18 would need a parent's permission to reclaim theirs, the release said.

The move comes as Boston police to date have recovered more than 150 fake guns in connection with real crimes the city said Monday. Police records track dozens of cases of toy weapons alarming neighbors or being used to commit crimes such as holding up convenience stores.

It also follows protests and unrest in Cleveland after police last year shot and killed 12-year-old Tamir Rice, who had been playing in a park with an Airsoft pistol.

At least one major Massachusetts retailer of Airsoft guns told Metro the new ordinance was a no-brainer.

"This is absolutely the right thing to do," said Randy Fink, owner of Stronghold Ops, an Airsoft dealer and battle arena in Abington.

Jordanian officer kills six, including two Americans

Security sources said several earlier militant plots to attack the King Abdullah Training Center had been foiled.

A Jordanian officer shot dead two U.S. government security contractors, a South African trainer and two Jordanians at a U.S.-funded police training facility near Amman on Monday before being killed in a shootout, Jordanian authorities said.

U.S. President Barack Obama said he was treating the attack at the King Abdullah Training Center, in which three Jordanians and one Lebanese citizen were wounded, very seriously and a full investigation was under way.

The gunman was a police captain, a senior Jordanian official told Reuters. There was no immediate word on the attacker's background or motive. But Jordan is a staunch U.S. ally in the Washington-led campaign against Islamic State militants who hold large areas of neighboring Syria and Iraq, a position Jordanian officials say leaves the kingdom vulnerable to jihadist attacks.

"This incident sadly does not come as a surprise as the threat of Islamist terrorism has only increased in the region in the last few years in the aftermath of Syria and Iraq. As much as pre-emptive measures have been taken, it is impossible to eradicate all risks," said a senior Jordanian official who requested anonymity, citing political sensitivities.

The U.S. Embassy in Amman said two American civilian security contractors and a South African contractor were shot to death, and one slain Jordanian was a translator. It was "premature to speculate on motive at this point" with the investigation proceeding, it said.

A second Jordanian, who had been in critical condition, died later of his wounds, Jordan's government said.

There were differing early reports on the number killed, with three U.S. sources saying eight people died in the attack. Jordanian government spokesman Mohammad Momani denied that and Jordan's official death toll stands at six.

A U.S. official said the two Americans were working for the U.S. State Department's International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs Bureau training Palestinian security forces. REUTERS

Obama launches Facebook page

The White House has launched a Facebook page for President Barack Obama — and used the social media platform to send a message on climate change.

Organizing for Action, the political organization that helped elect Obama, has long used an account under the name "Barack Obama." But the new page allows the president to speak in the first person, much like the Twitter account the White House launched for Obama in May.

Striking a conversational tone, Obama's first post was a video message on climate change that depicted the president walking around the South Lawn of the White House and marveling at the beauty of nature.

"Hello, Facebook! I finally got my very own page," Obama said in the post. "I'm kicking it off by inviting you to take a walk with me in my backyard — something I try to do at the end of the day before I head in for dinner."

In the video, Obama called on Americans to do their part to fight climate change.

"I want to make sure that the whole world is able to pass onto future generations the God-given beauty of this planet," Obama said, citing his upcoming trip to Paris to meet with world leaders on climate change. REUTERS

"If all of America is joining around this critical project, then we can have confidence that we're doing right by future generations and passing onto our kids all the blessings that we've received." Obama on Facebook

Halle Berry is sending us mixed breakup signals

Some two weeks after Halle Berry announced she and husband Olivier Martinez were splitting up, with a divorce filing and everything, the Oscar-winning actress was spotted driving around with him in L.A. And while they didn't necessarily seem terribly happy to be sharing the same car, Martinez did appear to be wearing his wedding ring again. Which is odd, since he'd ditched it within two days of the divorce news. So what gives, Berry? Or are you guys just really that devoted to being environmentally conscious that you'll still carpool even if it means being ridiculously uncomfortable?

Vivica A. Fox doubts 50 Cent's heterosexuality

This one gets nasty fast, so hold tight. While appearing on "Watch What Happens Live," Vivica A. Fox was asked by Andy Cohen if she was insinuating that ex-boyfriend 50 Cent is gay, and her response was a rather telling silent hair flip. Then she clarified: "No, he's not. He just seems like he's got something that's not quite clear."

Yikes. You might find this tough to believe, but Fiddy was none too pleased, letting loose with a tirade of Instagram comments, like on the photo he posted of her with "really bad boob" on which he commented, "B—, remember when you told me f— Halle Berry and you could have played all the roles she did better then her?" Fun times. Oh, and Fox isn't backing off, tweeting in follow-up, "I got some stories I stored in my vault, too." So I'm thinking this is only just beginning. Grab the popcorn.

Sweet home Chicago

Oliver Platt gets in on Dick Wolf's new TV empire with "Chicago Med."

LISA WEIDENFELD
@LisaWeidenfeld
lisa.weidenfeld@metro.us

Before there was Shonda Rhimes or Ryan Murphy, there was Dick Wolf, whose TV empire at this point stretches back several decades. Wolf got his start on "Hill Street Blues" before moving on to "Miami Vice" and creating the "Law and Order" universe. These days, he's focused on the city of Chicago, with both "Chicago Fire" and "Chicago P.D." finding a home on NBC. And now comes the latest iteration: "Chicago Med," which takes place in an often overwhelmed hospital in the city. Character actor Oliver Platt plays psychiatrist Daniel Charles on the show and says psychiatrists play a bigger role in hospitals than you might think.

You've switched between movies and TV quite often in your career. What pulled you back into network TV?
The writing. I've always had one rule about what job I took next, and it's always characterized by the best writing. When I first started in the '80s, there was still definitely more of a line between TV actors and movie actors, and I remember, actually, I was sitting on a couch and I was exhausted. I'd been on the road for like six months and had to go back out, but I had a little tiny break. And I remember watching "ER" with my wife, and I remember it being so sensational, and thinking, those actors get to sleep in their own bed every night, and they get to do this great work.

Were you familiar with the world Dick Wolf has created?
I actually wasn't that familiar with the Chicago shows. I'd just heard that people like them and they were good.

Shrinking again

You were also involved in the world of psychiatry on "Huff." Does the subject matter feel familiar?
One of the things that's very appealing to me about this show in the context of all of this incredible array of programming is how old-fashioned it is. I think there are going to be relationships that are serialized, but the stories are going to be discrete. There's going to be an A story for every episode that's going to start and end in that episode. And that's not easy to do! But that's very appealing to me.

But it's a real testimony to Dick's work and the brand. Forget about the person behind the show. I'm happy to tell you that Dick's an old friend, but even if I'd never met Dick before, and somebody said, "Dick Wolf wants you to be in his show," I'd right away be interested in exploring it. Just from knowing the quality of his work.

He does have a pretty good track record at this point.
Pretty good track record. I just remember thinking, hospital — ripped from the headlines. There's a lot of interesting things going on in public health. And even if there weren't, a hospital is such a natural, great petri dish for human drama.

How does a psychiatrist fit into the world of the hospital?
That's the interesting thing. That was one of the things that I was worried about. It was like, "Ooh, it would be really fun to play a psychiatrist," but what's the daily workday of a psychiatrist in a general hospital? I was worried that it would be just about paperwork or fundraising, but the truth is an alarming percentage of people who walk into emergency rooms are actually psychiatric patients. And that's a testament to the public mental health system. We decided that this guy, Daniel Charles — he's not a born administrator at all, but he has taken this job because he's interested in providing mental health support to people who don't have $400 an hour to spend on their brain and on their emotional life.

You've done a lot of comedic work over the years. Will we see that side of you on the show?
The kind of comedy I'm interested in is more found comedy, and I'm always interested in a character's sense of irony. I've never been very good at telling jokes. This is a good old-fashioned drama. But I don't know too many dramas that I'm interested in that don't have a strong sense of irony. And conversely, most great comedy is based on pain, suffering, neurosis and fear and loathing.

Well, that fits right in with your work as a psychiatrist.
Exactly.

Oliver Platt returns to TV with "Chicago Med," airing Tuesdays at 9 p.m. on NBC. NBC UNIVERSAL

Why take a class

Some rowing enthusiasts find they get into a zen headspace — Debra Strougo Frohlich calls it "almost meditative" — but many find the repetition monotonous and give up due to boredom. A rowing class adds a social aspect, creates a high-energy environment and mixes rowing with other exercises. The classes at Row House, with beginner and experienced levels, have participants get off the machines for intervals of squats, lunges, stretching of the hips and hamstrings, and push-ups. "What we're doing off the rower is building up your ability to spend more time on the rower," she says.

Going mainstream

Rowing is the hot new trend, but is it the right workout for you?

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

Gyms have been moving their equipment into classes for a few years now, from SoulCycle's stationary bikes to the recent spate of treadmill studios. Now a new star is emerging — and it could be the best workout yet.

"If I was locked on an island with only one piece of equipment to keep me in shape, rowing is what I would be doing because it does hit everything I need," says Eric Von Frohlich, co-owner of the boutique studio Row House.

Rowing was actually his dirty little secret back when he was a cycling instructor 10 years ago. "I needed something that was a little more full-body," he recalls, so he sought out CrossFit, which led him to rowing.

He opened Row House in March 2014 with his wife and business partner, Debra Strougo Frohlich, and they've just expanded to a second location last month. On the lines of gleaming Concept 2 machines, they teach classes focused on rowing intervals. They promise a strength and cardio workout that engages 88 percent of the body's muscles and burns up to 600 calories per session.

"The reason we really got into rowing is we saw across the board how helpful it was as a piece of apparatus for so many different points in life and for so many different populations," explains Debra. "And especially because we are New Yorkers and we're time-starved and at the end of the day it's the most efficient workout there is."

We asked the experts who would benefit most.

If you're starting from zero

Everything about the rowing experience is controlled by the user; Debra calls rowing the cardio version of yoga or Pilates. The pace is set by the user — the machine doesn't keep moving when you stop, like a treadmill or spin bike — and risk of injury is minimal because your feet are strapped into place and your knees and ankles remain aligned, with no chance of twisting or torquing.

"It really comes down to what you want to put into the activity," says Eric. "You're not limited by the equipment; you're limited by your fitness level and your ability to push as hard as you want to push. And that's something that's kind of beautiful and unique about it."

If you're trying to lose weight

Whether you have a little weight to lose or a lot, exercise can be unpleasant for many reasons. The constant jiggle of extra fat is not only uncomfortable but can be embarrassing, while the simple fact that you're carrying around more weight is tough on joints that would already be stressed by workouts like running. On a rower, you're not only sitting — on a seat that's much larger than a spin bike — but the motion is virtually no-impact and your center of gravity is low, keeping you more stable. "When you're on a rowing machine, you don't have gravity pulling down on you that way," Debra explains. "You don't feel like you're putting stress on your body; you feel like you're almost weightless."

If you sit all day

Sitting is the new smoking, as study after study has shown, affecting everything from brain function to raising your risk of diabetes — so more sitting may seem counter-intuitive. But that's how rowing targets some of the problems that people who sit for most of the day can develop. "The [rowing] motion is something that just about everyone needs, which is posterior strength and opening/closing of the hips," says Eric.

When you push back on a rower, you're loosening up your tight hamstrings, sitting at the optimal 90-degree angle and engaging the shoulder, back and core muscles. (Despite how it looks, the effort of rowing comes 60 percent from the legs, 30 percent core and just 10 percent arms.) It all adds up to better posture while seated, standing taller and reducing stress on the neck.

If you're looking to get toned

Debra stopped doing spin classes and put on almost 40 pounds during her last pregnancy four years ago. When it came time to get back in shape, she found that rowing not only improved her out-of-whack posture but could do what the bike could not.

"Once I got used to the rowing machine, I saw that it was getting all the hard-to-reach areas that a spin bike just never gets," she says. "You continue to strengthen your legs, your core and your upper body, which is really what you need for life, granted, but also for carrying a new baby."

Regulatory and Clinical Research Management:

New drugs, medical devices and procedures are introduced seemingly on a daily basis – just turn on the TV and see all the health-product related ads. Before any of these products can come on the market, they must pass through rigorous research trials to ensure they are safe and effective, and the design, manufacturing, and testing comply with regulations and standards. It's the role of highly trained regulatory and clinical research professionals, working in biotech and pharmaceutical companies, to manage these trails. This is a growing field for those with the right education and skills. Recruiters tasked with hiring for these key positions increasingly look for candidates with relevant advanced degree.

The Regis College Master of Science in Regulatory and Clinical Research Management provides the education needed to start or advance in this field. Courses such as Pharmaceutical Product Regulation, Clinical Research Methods, and Overview of the Health Product Industry help students navigate the increasingly complex areas of drug, device and biologics regulatory affairs, health economics and reimbursement, health policy and development, and clinical trial management. According to Rob Labriola, Head of Regulatory Services at Global Submit and a current student, "the program is a great place to meet people in the field, share new ideas and cover topics essential to expanding my expertise." With two specialty tracks, Product Regulation or Clinical Research Management, students develop expertise in their specific career paths. Electives allow the student to take courses from both tracks or to pursue other areas of interest. A required field experience course provides valuable industry experience. A flexible schedule of evening, weekend and hybrid classes make it possible for working professionals to earn a master's degree. In fact, this program offers a virtual classroom format; students with computer access can attend classes from any location in real-time. The program can be completed full or part-time. Certificates in Regulatory Management or Clinical Research are also available for those who want to explore this field or to obtain skills to supplement their current job roles.

Get the education you need at Regis, a university located just 12 miles from Boston, in Weston, Mass. Attend an Information Session on December 8 at 6:00 p.m. To RSVP for the information session or to contact a Graduate Admissions Counselor, call 781-768-7330 or email graduatedepartment@regiscollege.edu. 5 tips for paying off your college loans

Get a handle on post-grad finances with expert advice.

Grappling with paying back your student loans for the first time? Let these suggestions be your playbook:

1 Find your loans

Most borrowers have multiple loans taken out over time. Borrowers can find their federal loans via the National Student Loan Data System at www.nslds.ed.gov, or by calling 1-800-4-FED-AID. For private student loans, check www.annualcreditreport.com.

2 Investigate federal repayment options

Federal student loans typically have 10-year repayment terms. Paying the loan off faster will save on interest, but could prevent a borrower from achieving other important goals, such as saving for retirement or a down payment for housing.

Those who have trouble making payments on a 10-year term should check out consolidation, which can lower payments by stretching out the loan term to 15, 20 or even 30 years.

There are also income-based repayment plans for low earners. The latest version, Pay as You Earn (PAYE), caps payments at less than 10 percent of the borrower's income and allows balance forgiveness after 10 years for public service jobs and 20 years for private sector employment. For the lowest earners, PAYE can reduce required payments to zero.

3 Check out private repayment plans

Private lenders tend to have fewer repayment choices but may offer loan modifications, interest rate breaks and forbearance for strapped borrowers.

Sallie Mae, one of the largest lenders, offers an interest-only payment option for the first 12 months, says spokesman Rick Castellano.

Borrowers with good credit (or a credit-worthy co-signer) and sufficient incomes may be able to refinance private loans at lower rates. SoFi, CommonBond, Wells Fargo, Earnest, Citizens Bank and other institutions offer refinancing.

4 Consider changing your servicer

New federal loans are made by the federal government, but the feds designate private companies to take your payments, arrange payment alternatives and handle customer service.

Unfortunately, not all servicers are created equal, and borrower advocates complain that some do a lousy job of communicating repayment options or even properly handling paperwork.

Borrowers cannot change their servicer unless they opt to consolidate all their federal education debt. To consolidate, they would apply directly to the servicer they want: FedLoan Servicing (PHEAA), Great Lakes, Nelnet, or Sallie Mae.

5 Know where to go for help

If a problem or dispute cannot be resolved with a loan servicer, borrowers with federal loans can contact the Federal Student Aid Ombudsman and the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. The bureau also takes complaints regarding private lenders. REUTERS

WHEN SCHOOLS SAY THEY OFFER STUDENT SUPPORT, WHAT DO THEY MEAN?

It could mean a lot of different things. At Bay State College it means we understand that going back to school is a big decision. And, it means we understand your concerns about succeeding at the college level. That's why, regardless of how you see yourself doing in college, we see an opportunity to help you realize your potential with a community of support.

What else does it mean? It means that admissions counselors can show off our campus, answer your questions and guide you through our selection process—even before you apply. It means helping 95 percent of this year's freshman class receive grants or scholarships that don't have to be repaid. It means personal success coordinators and a closely-knit student body that can help make America's biggest college town feel a little more like home.

In the classroom, it means a wide variety of Associates and Bachelor's degree programs in such in-demand fields as healthcare, business, fashion, criminal justice and more. No matter which program you choose, it means learning in small classes from accessible professors with real-world experience in their field.

To fit your schedule, it means making classes available at night or online.

As you advance toward your degree, it means having a personal career advancement team. It means helping you write cover letters and resumes, creating mock job interviews and using social media to help you get noticed. It means internships at some of Boston's best companies and organizations to build working relationships with people that can help you find a full-time position doing what you love.

In the end, what does it all mean? It means that at Bay State College, we care as much about your comfort as we do your success. It means we're committed to providing you unmatched student support throughout your college journey. It means that going back to school doesn't mean going it alone.

In short, it means Bay State is the right choice for you.

Cambridge College

Cambridge College poised to meet the skyrocketing demand for skilled mental health professionals

The statistics are staggering. According to a recent New York Times article, the overall cost of mental health disorders will soon surpass all other non-communicable diseases, including heart disease and cancer.

What accounts for this surge? A number of factors, such as an aging and diversifying population that needs specialized and culturally appropriate counseling services; returning veterans who need trauma and addiction counseling; an emphasis on prevention and wellness in the workplace; and a focus on treating children and families together in a home-based setting.

As a result, demand for skilled mental health professionals is skyrocketing. The United States Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics, Occupational Outlook Handbook, cites that employment in this field is expected to increase by 29% over a decade, making it one of the fastest growing occupational fields in the country.

Cambridge College School of Psychology and Counseling (SOPC) is uniquely poised to help adult learners succeed and advance in this rapidly growing and changing field by preparing students for licensing and credentialing necessary to succeed in today's counseling careers. The SOPC is a practitioner-centered, graduate training program with an emphasis on addressing the health needs of diverse populations. Students are working adults, often positioned in clinical/counseling settings, and seeking to practice in a broad range of specializations.

As America's mental health needs continue to diversify, there has been a shift from large hospitals and clinics to working in specializations such as addictions, trauma and rehabilitation, community-based care and adult outreach, and home-based care for families and children.

Cambridge College School of Psychology and Counseling has kept abreast of those changing needs, with a proven track record of success with alumni working in areas that include community mental health services, in-home behavioral services, rehabilitation counseling, addictions counseling, employee assistance programs, and trauma and family counseling.

Learn more about exciting careers in this growing field by attending the Cambridge College School of Psychology and Counseling upcoming Open House on November 14th, at 10:00am in Cambridge. To learn more, please visit www.cambridgecollege.edu or call (800) 829-4723 today.

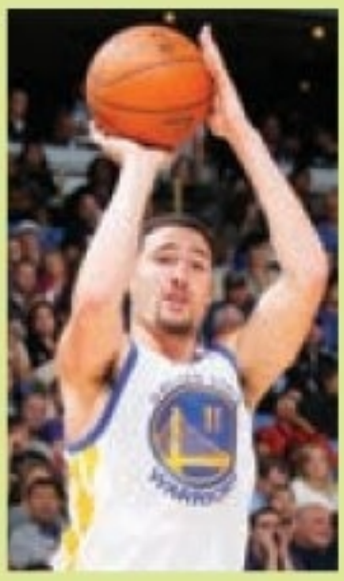
NBA power rankings | by James Toscano

No. 1

Warriors (7-0)



Stephen Curry finally came back down to Earth with a 2 for 10 performance beyond the arc on Saturday against the Kings, but more importantly the Warriors still won the game. Somehow, they're better than last year when they won the NBA championship.

No. 2

Cavaliers (6-1)

Everything is awesome between LeBron James and Kevin Love right now. The team has won six games in a row and Love looks involved. He was one rebound shy of a 20-20 game this weekend. But we'll know it's real when he makes one of James' Instagram photos.

No. 3

Spurs (4-2)

Everyone wants to talk about Kawhi Leonard and LaMarcus Aldridge, but the Spurs' bench is just as important to the team's continued success. Patty Mills and Manu Ginobili lead a second unit that has picked up a bench but is still working out some kinks.

No. 4

Rockets (4-3)

The ship has been righted in Houston as the Rockets are winners of four in a row after starting the season with three straight losses at 0-3. James Harden has been on a tear in those four games, averaging 38.5 points. Houston plays the Nets, Nuggets and Mavericks this week.

No. 5

Clippers (4-2)

The Clippers suffered two four-point losses to the Warriors and Rockets, the latter of which came without Chris Paul — who is dealing with a groin injury. The Clips may be deep, but not deep enough to survive without their point guard.

No. 6

Thunder (4-3)

The Thunder are set to play the Wizards in Washington on Tuesday night. That means Wizards fans will roll out the red carpet for Durant in hopes it helps sway his free agency decision (which will be made next offseason). If I'm a Thunder fan, I'd consider skipping this game.

No. 7

Hawks (7-1)

Well, this looks familiar. The Hawks have ripped off seven straight wins and now sit atop the Eastern Conference, just like they did in 2014-15. Hawks point guard Jeff Teague is still one of the more underrated players in the league.

No. 8

Raptors (5-2)

The Raptors were cruising through five games, but a 20-point loss to the Heat changes things quickly. Luckily, they've got the Knicks next to help get them back on track. They'll go to Philadelphia for another easy game against the Sixers before returning home to face the Pelicans this weekend.

No. 9

Pistons (5-1)

The six-game road trip has started off great for the Pistons, who beat the Suns and then came back to beat the Trail Blazers. Andre Drummond had 29 points and 27 rebounds against Portland. And no, that's not a typo. Things are looking up in Detroit.

No. 10

Heat (4-3)

The Heat opened a seven-game homestand on Sunday with a 20-point win over the Toronto Raptors. That's what you call an early statement win. The Heat should be a problem for many teams in the East this season. Miami faces the Lakers and Jazz with five days off this week.

No.21

Celtics (2-3)

The 20-point win over the Wizards was both surprising and necessary. Brad Stevens was forced to change his starting lineup around, and the team is getting off to better starts because of it. Will Isaiah Thomas stay a starter?

Pats RB Lewis done for year with ACL injury

Patriots running back Dion Lewis will miss the remainder of the 2015 season due to a torn ACL suffered in Sunday's win over the Redskins. Lewis was enjoying his best year as a pro this season, his first with the Patriots, as he ran for 234 yards and two touchdowns on 49 carries. He also scored two times off the pass and had emerged as New England's best option out of the backfield. Lewis wowed with ankle-breaking ability right out of the gate this season as he racked up 69 yards rushing on 15 carries in an opening night win over the Steelers. The name Ray Rice was immediately the talk of Twitter as a potential Lewis replacement on the Pats, but it would be highly unlikely that New England would take a risk on such a controversial player. MATT BURKE

B's need to ace November

The Bruins must rack up the wins during upcoming 'easy' stretch.

RICH SLATE
@RichSlate
sports@metro.us

Brad Marchand and the Bruins got back on the right track against the Islanders on Sunday. GETTY IMAGES

The Bruins (7-6-1) endured a three-game losing streak against the iron of the NHL (Dallas, Washington and Montreal) last week, but they were at least able to salvage something from a difficult road trip (1-2-0) with a 2-1 win at Barclays Center over the Islanders (7-5-3) on Sunday. The reward for Boston is that now they are off until Thursday (7 p.m., NESN), when they kick off a season-high five-game homestand at TD Garden by hosting the Colorado Avalanche (4-9-1). The B's have the second-worst home record in the NHL (1-4-1). Only Columbus is worse (0-5-0), but expect that to change over the next couple of weeks. The Bruins' next road game isn't until Nov. 23 at Toronto (2-8-4).

The rest of November sets up really well for Boston as six of its eight remaining contests this month will be at the Garden. Additionally, the B's will only play two teams (Minnesota Wild and New York Rangers) during that time who have a better record than them.

"It's the best that I've felt in a long time, so hopefully I feel like that every game and see the puck like that."

Bruins goaltender Tuukka Rask on his performance against the Islanders

After the Avalanche, the Bruins host the Red Wings (7-6-1) on Saturday night (7 p.m., NESN), Joe Thornton and the Sharks (7-7-0) next Tuesday (7, NESN), Minnesota (8-3-2) likely without star center Zach Parise next Thursday (7, NESN) and then the hapless Leafs a week from Saturday.

The Bruins have beaten the Islanders twice already this season, both times in Brooklyn. New York is a quality team and one that, like the B's, should be in the playoff mix this spring in the Eastern Conference.

"It's a great two points, especially after a tough road trip like we just had," said center Patrice Bergeron about the Sunday win over New York. "It was important for us to show up this afternoon and bring out a solid effort — being composed and not just bringing a good start of the game but kind of sustaining that for the full 60 (minutes), no matter what was happening on the ice. I thought we did a good job of that."

Goaltender Tuukka Rask (4-5-1) bounced back from consecutive losses with perhaps his best outing of the young season. His 36 saves were the most he's had in 2015-16.

The Bruins are in fourth place in the Atlantic Division, tied with fifth-place Detroit but only two points behind second-place Ottawa (7-4-3) and one point behind third-place Tampa Bay (7-7-2).

LEGAL NOTICES

CITATION ON PETITION FOR FORMAL ADJUDICATION

Docket No. SU15P2581EA

Commonwealth of Massachusetts
The Trial Court
Probate and Family Court

Estate of: Joanne Marie Rowley
Also Known As: Joanne Schlenk
Date of Death: 10/11/2014

Suffolk Probate and Family Court
24 New Chardon Street, Boston, MA 02114
(617) 788-8300

To all interested persons:
A Petition for Formal Probate of Will with Appointment of Personal Representative has been filed by Marjorie Suisman of Boston MA, requesting that the Court enter a formal Decree and Order and for such other relief as requested in the Petition. The Petitioner requests that: Marjorie Suisman of Boston MA, be appointed as Personal Representative(s) of said estate to serve With Corporate Surety on the bond in an unsupervised administration.

You have the right to obtain a copy of the Petition from the Petitioner or at the Court. You have a right to object to this proceeding. To do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance and objection at this Court before: 10:00 a.m. on the return day of 12/03/2015.
This is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline by which you must file a written appearance and objection if you object to this proceeding. If you fail to file a timely written appearance and objection followed by an affidavit of objections within thirty (30) days of the return day, action may be taken without further notice to you.

UNSUPERVISED ADMINISTRATION UNDER THE MASSACHUSETTS UNIFORM PROBATE CODE (MUPC)
A Personal Representative appointed under the MUPC in an unsupervised administration is not required to file an inventory or annual accounts with the Court. Persons interested in the estate are entitled to notice regarding the administration directly from the Personal Representative and may petition the Court in any matter relating to the estate, including the distribution of assets and expenses of administration.

WITNESS, Hon. Joan P Armstrong, First Justice of this Court.
